Foes of hill building turn to Powers

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

KENSINGTON — Both proponents and opponents of a Colusa Circle development plan are their eyes on Contra Costa County Supervisor Tom Powers as they regroup their forces in anticipation of the next public hearing on the project.

The plan by Edward Hammonds of Diversified Real Equity Investments to turn Colusa Circle into a 30,000-square-foot complex of offices and shops is scheduled to come before the Board of Supervisors June

County planning commissioners gave the project initial approval last month, although they recommended the four-phase construction be suspended halfway through to allow for re-evaluation of potential traffic and parking problems.

Residents who oppose the project see Powers, Kensington's representative on the Board of Supervisors, as their main hope. A group of critics presented some of their concerns to Powers last Wednesday and urged him to be their advocate on the issue.

Powers afterwards met with Hammonds, who described the session as eventful and short. And earlier in the day, the supervisor had met with Kensington Police Chief Jack Christian to discuss policing problems posed by the new development.

While cordial and attentive toward the Kensington residents assembled in a conference room in his Richmond office, Powers made no firm commitments.

He pointed out that the project

RUSD's plea to the Duke

By BARBARA ERICKSON

School districts throughout the state, hard hit by cuts in education funding, now have a model for their lobbying efforts — a factual letter from Richmond Unified Superintendent Richard Lovette to Governor Deukmejian.

Lovette's letter, dated April 6, lists the income and expenses in Richmond Unified over the past six years and the devastating program cuts during that time. It describes the district's bleak prospects in the coming fiscal year, where a $3.5 million deficit is forecast.

The appeal so impressed Herb Salinger, executive director of the California School Boards Association, that he sent copies to all school districts throughout the state. Salinger also sent a cover letter urging other superintendents to use Lovette's appeal as a model for lobbying the governor.

David Taylor, assistant to the superintendent, said Lovette's letter came out of a coalition working on a possible tax initiative for Richmond Unified. The group includes former Assemblyman John Knox, Republican leader Bill Moses, former assistant to the superintendent George Hammenson, Lovette, school board president Katherine Lord and board member Frank Calton. Assemblyman John Campbell, D-Richmond, was also present when the letter was discussed.

Lovette's letter sticks to the problems faced within Richmond Unified, not each district in the state can list a similarly sad litany caused by the decline in education funding.

Four schools will be closed

1000 Oaks School is spared

By MADELEINE VON LAUE

The school board has voted to close Hillside, John Muir, Whittier and Franklin schools, ending the time being what has become the annual spring debate over school closings.

Hillside, Muir and Franklin will close at the end of the school year this June. Whittier is scheduled to close in June 1984. Thousand Oaks School, put on the list of possible closures, was spared.

It was a sad moment for parents, many of whom tearfully embraced each other after the meeting. Some said they would have to live with the choices, and a few said they were investigating legal challenges. About 220 people attended the meeting Wednesday night in the Berkeley Community Theatre.

In making its decision, the board adopted all but one of Superintendent David P. Tansey's original four recommendations. John Muir was added to the list last week at the request of several board members who said they wanted an alternative to Emerson, one of the original schools recommended for closure, because of land-use considerations.

The vote to close John Muir was the least expected and it was not unanimous. In addition to Carroll Williams, who has steadfastly opposed school closings and who didn't vote for any of the schools, Ethel Manheimer voted no, making the vote 3-2. Manheimer joined members Barbara Lubin, Anna de Leon and Stephen Lustig in voting to close the other three schools.

Manheimer said after the meeting that it was "more appropriate" to keep John Muir open, becuause it is the newest building in the district (rebuilt in 1980), has a better library and is accessible.

Board members attached several conditions to the closings. Whittier, located near the north Shattuck commercial area, will remain open a year to give the district and the neighborhood time to discuss an agreeable alternative use for the site.

Teaching city's 'hidden' migrant workers

Several classes offered at the racetrack

By CHARLES PELTON

ALBANY — Many Albany residents don't know that there is a large community of migrant workers who live right on the grounds of Golden Gate Fields. Until this year, the Albany School District also didn't know.

Virginia Behm

Beginning March 21, MacGregor High School began to offer consumer education, math and English as a Second Language (ESL) courses in a racetrack outreach program. The program is geared to the racetrack's Hispanic migrant workers, many of whom are of school age.

"There is a whole community of kids and adults that have real educational needs at the track," Virginia Behm, principal of MacGregor High, said at the last Albany school board meeting.

California law stipulates that all children between the ages of six and sixteen must be provided with some kind of education. However, because the population at Golden Gate Fields fluctuates and because there is no enforcement of state law, many youngsters "fall through the cracks," according to Behm.

The situation is further complicated by federal law, which provides education and other social services for agricultural transient workers, but does not apply to migrant workers at racetracks.

Federal education law defines transient workers as those who follow the preparation and harvesting of traditional crops such as tomatoes, lettuce, and artichokes. Race horses are not considered a crop.

"The state does not enforce mandatory education, but we have a moral obligation to provide education," Superintendent Stephen Goldstone said.

The problem is identification. There are some people who stay less than a month at the racetrack. Behm estimates that the maximum time someone might stay in Albany is six months.

This winter's rains have caused even greater instability to migrant populations. Because many agricultural fields are inundated with water, more people have been looking for work at racetracks.

With the initial assistance of Chaplain Sam Sanchez of Bay Meadows and Robert McAnnaly of the Horseman's Benevolent and Protective Association, Behm was able to start an on-site program which uses the resources of both MacGregor High and the Adult School.

Two kinds of classes are offered. One, which enrolls students qualifying for continuing education, meets three times a week. Math and consumer education are taught.

The other course, where English is taught, is open to people of all ages and is offered on the same evenings. "We've enlisted the aid of some Albany High School Spanish students in the ESL classes," Behm said.

According to Behm, who has nicknamed the program "Mutuel High" and "Not Furlong High," enthusiasm

An Emmy for Captain Video men

Commercials aid the Big Brothers

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

ALBANY — A series of television commercials enlisting the prestige of Abe Lincoln, Albert Einstein, Alexander Graham Bell, Scott Joplin, Humphrey Bogart and Ludwig von Beethoven to promote a worthy cause have won a local businessman a trophy.

Andrew Brier, owner of the new Captain Video store at the corner of San Pablo and Solano avenues, accepted an American Academy of Television Arts and Sciences regional emmy award last week in the public service announcement category.

The commercials were made for the San Francisco chapter of Big Brothers, but other chapters have expressed interest in using them.

Barry Waronker, manager of the Captain Video store, wrote the commercials, and Brier supervised the shooting in his San Francisco photography studio.

A third major figure in the project was Paul Geffner, owner of a Captain Video store in downtown San Francisco.

The trophy, a gilded statue of a winged figure holding up a sphere that appears to symbolize the universe, lists Brier as the the recipient. But he and Waronker credit a crew of volunteers, including a dozen actors and several experienced video technicians, for the project's success.

The two men also credit the project for bringing them together and leading to the establishment of their Albany store, part of a loosely-knit chain that sells and rents videotapes and discs.

"This project really changed my life," Brier said recently. For one thing, he joined Big Brothers. "I have a little brother — his name's James. He's a great kid."

For another, the experience prompted him to form his own production company, and he hopes before long to be doing custom-tailored video work and made-for-tv movies.

The whole thing began when Waronker met Geffner at a meeting of a Big Brothers public relations committee. Both men were members of the organization (Waronker's "little brother" is named Jason, and Geffner's is Lonnie).

The two men agreed that Big Brothers commercials were too "negative," Waronker recalled. "We didn't like the charity pitch. We both felt we were having a lot of fun." So they put their heads together to come up with an alternative.

Waronker remembers the day they took a long, brainstorming walk on Potrero Hill. Waronker was then a copywriter in an advertising agency, but had worked as a comedy writer. He suddenly hit on the idea of casting historic characters in the role of big brothers. Lines like this emerged: "People say 'Abe, you're so busy being president and running the country, how do you find time to be a big brother?' "

Waronker proceeded to write a series of sketches, while Geffner "started putting people together."

One of the people was Brier, a photographer whom Geffner had met some years before on Fisherman's Wharf, where Brier had been selling his photographs while Geffner peddled leather-bound diaries and notebooks.

Geffner also managed to recruit professional makeup and costume artists and an award-winning cameraman.

Brier's studio had to be soundproofed, sets had to be built and painted, and more and more people became involved. The crew borrowed cameras and lights, and scheduled shooting of six commercials in a single weekend.

"If you can do one commercial in a weekend, you're doing great," Waronker observed. "Obviously, we didn't know what we were doing. If we'd been in our right minds we never would have done it. But it was the only way we could do it because of all these volunteers."

The project cost Big Brothers nothing, according to Waronker, with Geffner frequently dipping into his own pocket to cover expenses. "Every time we had a bill we couldn't figure out out to pay, he paid it," Waronker said.

What came out of the marathon shooting session were six vignettes, each featuring a famous character from history with his "little brother." Several local television stations accepted them as public service announcements, which air in irregular time slots not filled by paid commercials.

In one commercial, Abe Lincoln remarks that he and his little brother not only have fun, but also "learn from each other." Whereupon his little friend hands him a sheet of paper and asks for Abe's comments. Abe reads in a ponderous voice, "Four score and seven years ago..." and adds, "I like it!"

In another, Albert Einstein's little brother asks for help with his homework. "Uh oh," Einstein exclaims, clutching his mop of white hair. "New math!"

Humphrey Bogart/aka Sam Spade and his little brother stand together on an airfield, dressed in trenchcoats and slouch hats pulled partway over their faces. Both are old movie fans. Better yet, the kid's favorite flick is "Casablanca." "I think this is the beginning of a beautiful friendship," the Bogart character remarks.

As a byproduct of the collaboration, Waronker went to work in Geffner's store and Geffner convinced Brier to start a Captain Video branch in Albany. The Albany store opened in March. Waronker, who lives in North Berkeley, became manager, and Brier subsequently moved from San Francisco to a condominium on Albany Hill.

When the Big Brother commercials were entered in the regional emmy competition, "I personally didn't take it that seriously," Brier said. He was surprised when they made it through the first round of judging.

Their cameraman, apparently tipped off to the results, reserved a table at the awards banquet in San Francisco and urged Brier and Geffner to go. "I hate big affairs like that; I never feel comfortable with rooms full of people in tuxedoes," Brier said. But his mother urged him to go, saying he could mention her name if he made an acceptance speech. He and Geffner came in late, just as their emmy was being announced.

While Waronker and Brier are pleased about the award, it clearly has not gone to their heads."When a producer gets an award, it's only because he's been lucky enough to put together all the people who can do the work for him," Brier said.

"The thrill of showing up and receiving this status was not nearly as great as the rush that I got when we actually finished the last take on the last shooting," he added.

"Awards are funny things. The Captain Video team won a softball trophy last year. That was much easier for me to deal with than the emmy."

El Cerrito spring festival

The Open House, an El Cerrito senior center, will hold its fifth annual Spring Festival on Saturday, May 14, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Center director Ellen MacDonald said the event will include a white elephant sale, as well as foods and plants. All proceeds will benefit the center's programs and help purchase equipment and supplies. There will be a drawing for many prizes, including $100 for first place.

eligible to enter the University of California system" for lack of preparation.

He noted that many elementary schools share principals and added, "Our employees received no salary increase this year, nor will they next year."

Lovette asked Deukmejian to reverse the trend, if not this year then over the next two to three years.

"We must know what the future holds for the public schools of California," he wrote, "so that we can at least properly advise parents who ask us about the educational future of their children."

At a recent meeting of urban school representatives, Lovette said, officials recommended a bi-partisan effort like the Richmond coalition to draft a letter to the governor. When Lovette told them Richmond had already done just that, he said, "they were impressed."

"The governor must be convinced," he said, because he could veto any legislation on school funding that manages to pass the Legislature.

Public education in California began its decline in 1973, Lovette wrote, when SB90 became law and placed public schools on a revenue limit basis.

Later, Proposition 13 cut so deeply into property tax revenues that districts were forced to depend on the state, and now the state itself is facing a big deficit.

Income for Richmond Unified has gone from $53.7 million in 1978-79, Lovette noted, to an estimated $61.9 million this year and $61.4 million next year. During the same time expenses have risen from $55.9 million in 78-79 to about $62 million this year and $64.8 million next year.

He listed the major program and staff cuts the school board made in the past two years — the six-period day in grades seven, eight, 11 and 12; nine counselors and eight counselor aides; five elementary music teachers; safety busing; 16 custodians; funds for high school newspapers; interscholastic sports; and many other reductions.

The district is now faced, he said, with cutting an additional period from the high schools, and this would mean that "our students will not be

Franklin was closed with the condition that special activities like the bilingual program and the Gilbert and Sullivan Troupe be moved intact. John Muir, due to legal restraints upon alternate uses by the state because of its park, is to remain in use for child care and other related programs.

In an attempt to allay community fears about future uses of the schools, several board members indicated their intention not to sell the buildings, although no formal motion was made.

"That space is not going to be moved," Manheimer said, "or sold to be developed into a Golden Bear (a proposed 10-story center near Whittier school). The use of the playgrounds for recreation won't be changed."

Manheimer also echoed the board sentiment when she said: "We won't suggest any additional school closings for at least four years. As far as I'm concerned, tonight will end the phrase, 'spring closure' (referring to complaints from parents that school closings are proposed every spring)."

After sitting through five nights of public hearings and listening to 250 speakers, the board members gave themselves time to state their own positions at length. De Leon, who made the move to close John Muir, said the choice between John Muir and Emerson (both located in southeast Berkeley and considered to be competing against each other) boiled down to neighborhood issues.

"The impact of closing Emerson upon the neighborhood would be more massive," de Leon said. "John Muir is on a major arterial."

Most of the board members said the Sedway study, an economic study of district property that was roundly criticized by members of the community for its land-use proposals, was not a major factor in their decision. The location of schools and of student population was, however, cited as an important criteria.

Lustig defended the board against charges that closing neighborhood schools will precipitate "white flight," thus destroying integration.

"Closing schools won't affect integration," he said. "People who pull their children out will affect it."

Lustig also said closing schools was "not the path of least resistance."

"I greet the call for an education foundation (one of the alternatives proposed by parents to closing schools) with a mixture of joy and slight cynicism," he said. "I've been trying for a year and a half to generate interest."

Williams criticized the board for voting to close any schools at all. He said the district has already closed enough classrooms in the last 10 years to make up for declining enrollment.

"We're going to have a tight fit," he said. "The programs you (parents) now enjoy will be but a memory."

He also fended off criticism of county planning staff, saying he was confident the staff was giving the project the scrutiny it deserved.

However, he acknowledged concern about the plan's traffic and parking provisions, and raised the idea of requiring the developer to reverse the order of construction to provide most of the new off-street parking at the outset.

Parcourse: running for fun

A first-person report on the Albany track

By STEVE TADY

ALBANY — Albany's ParCourse has nothing to do with golf.

The mile-long exercise trail winds back and forth under the BART tracks along Masonic Avenue. Its main function appears to be to relieve the boredom sometimes associated with straight jogging.

"It's better than jogging. You get a good workout on all body parts, not just the legs," according to UC-Berkeley student Mark Smithson.

Smithson lives in Albany and used to run right by the 18-station course while jogging under the tracks. Now he stops at each station, and has lengthened his daily run.

"I think the ParCourse has helped me get in better all-around shape. It's an excellent idea," he grunted as he churned out 20 sit ups.

The ParCourse was built in 1979, donated to the city by the Rotary Club, which was having its 50th anniversary. The cost of the materials was about $8,000.

With all that in mind, I set out if it was, indeed, better than jogging. Will it become a national craze?

First, the insructions. A large green plastic-covered board spelled out the idea behind the ParCourse.

The trail starts with mild stretching exercises, builds to more strenuous work (push-ups, chin-ups and leg raises) and ends with more stretching. The sign says to walk between some stations and jog between others, the idea being to work out all body parts.

There are three levels of workout: starting par, sporting par and championship par.

I decided to shoot for the championship par on all stations and jog between each station because the course didn't look very long. It was the end of the day and I wasn't thinking clearly.

The first staion was no problem. I counted out 30 jumping jacks and took off for number two, the Touch and Stretch.

Again, I found nothing difficult in touching my toes and stretching skyward the required number of times to meet the championship par (20).

I was jogging toward El Cerrito Plaza now and the BART trains constantly reminded me of just how slow I was going. But the trail was clear of heavy auto exhaust and I had plenty of company. The Albany ParCourse is well-used.

The distance between each station was not far and I was confident.

I went through the next four stations without great strain. The Hop-Kick (three) was designed to stretch the back of the leg, number four was called Knee Lift, easy. I hopped over logs for number five and stepped up and down off a small wooden block on number six.

The course then twisted back toward Albany just after catching sight of Capwell's in the El Cerrito Plaza.

The run toward station seven was longer and I decided that this wouldn't be the short jog I had once envisioned.

Station seven was called Circle Body with three pair of rings on chains dangling from bars. Oh boy, gymnastics.

This too was a stretching exercise (grabbing the rings and rotating the body in a circle while keeping the feet planted) and I wondered when the real stuff would begin.

After 60 seconds of squatting with my back against a board for station eight (this made my legs shake), I found the answer.

Chin-ups were next at station nine and the jog was getting longer with each station.

I could never do many chin-ups in high school and the championship par required 20 of them. I'm still dreaming of doing 20 chin-ups. I cranked out eight.

Next was the Vault Bar, a kind of silly exercise requiring 15 jumps over an angled wooden bar. I felt stupid doing the exercise and must have looked idiotic.

The jog was now tiresome and I welcomed the Touch Toe station (11) which allowed for a brief rest while doing "berry pickers."

Two gut-wrenching stations followed as I did sit-ups at station 12 and tried what was called the Body Curl at 13. That's where you're supposed to grab this metal pipe and lift your legs back up over your head while lying on a wooden board which is tilted at a distressing angle to make it harder.

Station 14 required 20 push-ups and it took me two sets to get all 20 done. I was beginning to regret the decision to jog between stations.

There were just four stations left. Number 15 was the Leg Raise, more abdominal work. Ouch, 30 times.

The Hand Walk was also difficult but I managed to make it back and forth three times along the bars designed to strengthen shoulders and arms.

To my relief, that was it for the hard exercise. The Leg Stretch (17) and an easy walk along the Balance Beam ended the course.

"Congratulations," proclaimed the sign at the end of the trail. I think a better message would have been "Thank God."

Reporter Steve Tady took his notebook out onto the Albany Parcourse last week, eager to learn just what the parcourse was about. He thought it was going to be easy. In the photo at left, he practices leg stretches; (below), he manages to vault over the bar.

E.C. band at Yosemite

Visitors to Yosemite heard a special concert by El Cerrito High School students last month.

Forty-two members of the band, with their music director Terry Clark, were on a weekend excursion to the park. The trip, paid for by band membes, included giving concerts at Mariposa High School and the El Portal Community Center.

The park superintendent heard them play and invited them to play at Yosemite Lodge the following evening.

BART adds trains for Bay-to-Breakers

BART will provide special "Bay-to-Breakers" train service on Sunday, May 15 from six east bay Bart stations.

The seven stations that will open earlier than usual on Sunday for special train service to Embarcadero are: Concord, Lafayette, El Cerrito Del Norte, MacArthur, Oakland West, South Hayward and Daly City.

These stations will open a half-hour prior to the departure of the first train from each station. Following the departure of the last "Bay-to-Breakers" train from a station, the station will close until 9 a.m., the beginning of regular BART train service on Sundays.

Trains departing Concord, El Cerrito Del Norte and South Hayward stations will make a station stop at Lafayette, MacArthur and Oakland West stations, respectively, then travel non-stop to Embarcadero Station. From Daly City Sttion, trains will travel non-stop to Embarcadero.

Each station will have two trains departing, with the second departing 45 minutes after the first train. The trains are scheduled to arrive at Embarcadero Station between 6:31 a.m. and 7:42 a.m., which allows enough time to walk to Howard and Beale streets by 8 a.m. — the starting point and time of the race.

After the race, San Francisco MUNI will be operating extra buses to shuttle runners and spectators from the finish line back to downtown BART stations. The extra buses will be in service from 8:15 a.m. to approximately 12:30 p.m.

Memorial fund established for UC teacher

The family of UC-Berkeley chemistry Professor Joel H. Hildebrand, a Kensington resident, has asked that contributions in his memory be made to a fund that will endow a faculty teaching award and chemistry lecture series.

Hildebrand, who began his career at UC-Berkeley in 1913 and remained at the campus for the next 70 years, died at his home in Kensington recently after suffering a stroke. He was 101.

The family asked that contributions be made to the Joel H. Hildebrand Fund. Checks may be made payable to the UC Regents and addressed to the Hildebrand Fund, Office of the Dean, College of Chemistry, University of Calfornia, Berkeley 94720.

Berkeley Chancellor I. Michael Heyman said the campus "has been both lucky and honored to have Joel Hildebrand on the faculty for 70 years. He was a professor who valued teaching equally with research and an academic leader who never compromised in the quest for excellence."

Hildebrand is survived by his wife of 74 years, Emily; a daughter, Mrs. Louis Klein of Kensington; three sons, Milton Hildebrand of Davis, Roger Hildebrand of Chicago and Alexander Hildebrand of Manteca.

Teaching migrant workers is high.

"Students are treating every pencil as if it's gold," she said. "They are wonderful to us."

Several factors limit participation by the workers, many of whom are stable hands and "hot walkers." For instance, if a horse under a worker's care needs attention, he may not be able to go to class. Family problems also come first.

Behm hopes to be able to expand the program next year to provide for the education of some of the younger children who migrate with their parents into the racetrack.

"Perhaps we could provide transportation to get these younger kids across the freeway to Vista School for ESL classes," she said.

The district is not bearing any additional cost for the program. Funds come out of money generated by both the Adult School and MacGregor High.

"This is a maiden voyage of the whole concept in the district," Behm said. "I want to search out all the kids who have an educational need in this community."

In the first item of business at its May 3 meeting, the school board elected Robert L. Nehls, Sr. as its president, and Kay Rabin, vice president, for the 1983-84 academic year. According to the school district's official policies, the board must reorganize at its first regular meeting in May.

Nehls was board president on two previous occasions — over the 1970-71 and 1976-77 academic years. He has served as a board member almost continuously since 1964. Nehls did not serve in 1979 and 1980 because of an amendment to the city charter which prohibits both board members and city council members from serving more than two consecutive terms.

Aware of Nehls' long history of service to Albany schools, Dr. Gerald Brunetti, the outgoing president, joked as he nominated Nehls: "He's a nice young man whom we have been grooming for the job."

Nehls, 59, a resident of Albany since 1951, has five children, all of whom graduated from Albany High School. With a storefront on Solano Avenue just over the Berkeley line, he has been active in the insurance industry, in sales, recruiting and training.

In other business the school board:

- Voted to buy new textbooks for both the foreign language and industrial arts departments. Over $6,000 will be spent to buy new texts and instructional materials for Spanish and French courses for both the middle school and the high school. Nearly $2,000 will be spent for new industrial arts texts.

According to Spanish teachers Marilyn Imes and Sally Benjamin, the need is especially acute for the Spanish program. They described their materials, first purchased in 1965 as "very old and tattered."

"We've always been a sick little step-sister to the French (department's) methods," Imes said. "Our materials didn't have any guts to them." The new texts will have more readings, more vocabulary and present a more complete cultural background.

The review of industrial arts and foreign language is part of a process whereby the school district reviews all disciplines over a regular six year cycle.

"By looking at the curriculum regularly we can see what we're doing and what we should be doing," assistant superintendent Richard Rosenquist said.

- Voted to join SCRUB, Schools Committee for Reducing Utility Bills, a statewide organization concerned about lowering utility costs for school districts. SCRUB is empowered to represent school districts before such organizations as the California Public Utilities Commission. Albany becomes the 226th school district to join the group.
- Received another $4,000 from the Albany High School Boosters Organization from its weekly bingo games. The money will help to defray costs for individual student's participation in after school sports activities.

Flowe feast

An exhibit of water color paintings of flow by Sherr Lynn E will be on display May 17-21, at The Caning St 926 Gilman St., Berkeley. Shown is "Mid Meditation."

Rockridge offers free dosing spoons

ALBANY — The Rockridge Health Plan, at its new Albany office, will be giving away free dosing spoons to anyone who goes by the center between Monday, May 9 and Friday, May 13.

Doctors say that many parents incorrectly use everyday kitchen spoons to administer medication to their children. "Teaspoons and tablespoons come in so many shapes and sizes that using silverware is not an accurate guide," Dr. Debi Juarez, a clinical pharmacist with the health maintenance organization said.

Physicians and pharmacists have invented several devices to address the problem. Accurate amounts of medication can be measured with both pediatric measuring spoons that have a special lip and with dosing syringes, Juarez said.

"One potential danger is with the liquid cold preparations parents give to children for common cold symptoms," she said. "If a child were to be given excessive amounts these could result in side effects such as drowsiness, or, in some cases, even hyperactivity."

People who wish to pick up a free dosing spoon can go to Rockridge's Albany office which is located at 828 San Pablo Avenue near Solano. Office hours are 9:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. and 1:15 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

New activities at Richmond Annex center

By ARLENE EAGAN

It will be hard for senior citizens to sit still with Donna Chavez around. As the new activities director at the Richmond Annex Senior Center, Chavez keeps people on their toes.

She will also keep them on their feet — she's organizing "a walking group" to get the older adults out for neighborhood strolls. She's starting the group because she enjoys walking and running; she faithfully jogs two miles every morning.

"Walking's really good exercise," Chavez said. "We also have a class called gentle gym, but it's not so gentle. Seniors do sit-down exercises and dancing."

Chavez, 26, has been working at the center for only one month, but she already knows most of the attendees' names and is constantly drumming up ideas for new activities. Her exuberance and friendliness are catching, and she has already generated a lot of enthusiasm.

About 60 volunteers help with the activities at the center, but Chavez said there's always room for more. Volunteers have done everything from decorating the center with flowers to helping cook the weekly Sunday brunch.

Volunteer Edith Drott, president of the center's advisory board, said she enjoys working at the center because she's "so used to the public, and used to working. I couldn't be home! I felt like I had to give of myself to people."

Although the center has been without an activities director for the past nine months, Chavez said the recreation program was well-organized when she arrived. She has kept the same program, with a few additions and changes.

"They have liked some new things, but there's certain things that people just don't want to change," she said. "In other words, if it works, don't fix it."

Chavez has a bachelor's degree in recreation administration from San Francisco State University and works part time at Tiny Tots, a preschool recreational learning program in El Sobrante. She spends her mornings with the tots, her afternoons at the senior center, and some of her evenings teaching young adults in the Navy in an alcohol and drug information program.

Her diverse jobs and busy schedule require a lot of energy and thought, but she said she has no trouble switching from job to job each day.

"The activities change, but my personality and the way I talk don't change," she said.

While she talked, people around her were chatting, quilting, and making table decorations for Mother's Day. Members of the center's stage troupe, the Firehouse Players, were preparing a production of "The Mikado" for local convalescent homes and senior centers.

The center has been in operation for three years and is owned by the city of Richmond. It's a colorful and sunny little building with a large strip of grass bordering it and an outdoor area for barbeques and croquet.

"It's a really pretty center," Chavez said. " It's cute and it's in a residential neighborhood. We were lucky."

The center, at 5801 Huntington Ave., will sponsor a spring festival next month with a make-your-own-taco potluck, and has brunch every Sunday for $1.50, a potluck twice a month, card games, craft classes and day trips. For more information, call the Richmond Annex Center at 526-3553.

Angela Lelime comes to Kensington after years of volunteer work in Oakland

Kensington senior chief

By ROBERTA ALEXANDER

KENSINGTON — After years of working with older adults on a volunteer basis, Angela Lelime has turned pro.

Appointed last winter as director of the Kensington Senior Activity Center, Lalime is eager to help the weekly program in the hillside community grow.

"After 13 years as a volunteer at the Fruitvale center (in Oakland), I finally got my teaching certificate," Lalime recalled. "I went to this job interview really just to get practice in case I wanted to apply for jobs later, and they offered it to me!"

Lalime (it's pronounced Lah-leem) is in her late 40s, married, a native of London. She's a skilled needleworker, and has taught needlepoint and other stitchery for years.

"I'm trying now to interest new participants," she said. "I know they are out there, particularly newly retired people."

The center is open Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at the Arlington Community Church at 52 Arlington Ave. Activities include classes (Lalime says the French conversation class is particularly popular), workshops and games, as well as a weekly speaker and lunch.

"It's been a challenge for me to set up these programs," Lalime said. "At the Fruitvale center, we concentrated on crafts. Here I need to get interesting people and line it up a month in advance. I'm certainly learning a lot."

Despite the occasional scheduling hassles, she enjoys the work, for she believes that participants' interest in a variety of subjects is symbolic of their continued interest in life in general.

"It's particularly important as we grow older to maintain our interest in things, to be willing to learn new things," she said. "I hope I am able to do the same as I get older."

Youths take math prizes

Two Albany students received honors in the 31st Poly Royal Math Contest April 21, the oldest continuously running math contest for California high school students.

The contest, sponsored by Cal Poly's Mathematics Department, is held on the first day of Poly Royal, the university's annual two-day open house.

In the Tri-Math-Lon portion of the contest, a three-phase competition for high-school juniors that ends wtih a four-way "Quiz Bowl," Jonathan Safir of Albany High School and Kenneth Lin of Oak Grove High School, San Jose, tied for first.

Student winners in the audience participation contest included Hei-Mei Liao, Albany High School, third place.

Misleading info on second units

ALBANY — The city's public works director, Robert Guletz, said he is concerned that residents are receiving incorrect information about adding second units to exisiting homes.

He said the city building inspector recently found a homeowner removing his front porch to allow for a parking space in the front yard for a second unit. The homeowner explained that he had heard that second units were now allowed under a new state law, Guletz said.

"There is a new state law, but it does not go into effect until July 1, nor does it change local building permit and zoning requirements," he said. "And, it allows to city to regulate second units, or even to totally prohibit them."

Guletz said the city of Albany tentaviely plans to allow second units, subject to local ordinance regulations.

For example, the Planning and Zoning Commission is considering regulations such as a minimum lot size of 5000 square feet and a maxiumum site for the proposed units, he said. However, the off-street arking requirements will allow for two spaces in addition to the parking spaces for the existing house.

Guletz said this requirement is set by Initiative Measure D approved by local voters n 1978 which cannot be changed except by another election. These required off-street parking spaces must be located in the rear yard, not the front yard or side yard, he added.

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

Paul Lukas is undoubtedly the world's leading composer of single dummy bridge problems.

In this type of problem you must try to find either a certainty against any combination of adverse cards or the play most likely to succeed if a sure thing play is not available.

We have given many of his problems from the Bridge World magazine in this column. Here is one of his first and a real bit of bridge whimsy.

We have filled in the East-West hands, but they really make no difference. South has a sure thing play.

South wins the club and must play his queen of spades. If West takes his king, South can claim with four spades, two hearts, two diamonds and four clubs so West must duck.

Now South leads his jack of hearts. Again West can't afford to take. South will have 10 top tricks at his disposal so West ducks again. Now South simply goes after diamonds to come away with two spades, three hearts, three diamonds and four clubs.

Pure whimsy, but a delightful problem.

Astro-graph

If your birthday is today, May 8:
Handle any dealing2s with newtound friends with caution in the year ahead. Pals good for you in the past are your best allies.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Someone with whom you may be associating today might feel what's yours is his and have no qualms about claiming your property. Take care.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
No one can make you feel insignificant unless you display the hypersensitivity this person feeds upon. Call his or her bluff and hold your head up high.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
With the mood you're in today, you could easily begin to imagine all unkind thoughts about yourself. Don't be your own worst enemy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
If your instincts are alerting you that somebody is masking his or her real motives, heed the warnings. Protect yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
There are times when humility is called for, but today if you're out with important people don't use this ploy. That's not what they're looking for.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Flattery doesn't usually fool you, yet today you may swallow a line by one who is masterminding a plot to get you to do his or her bidding.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Squandering funds in order to keep up with the Joneses is folly. All you'll gain is a depleted bank account and privation later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Take care today that you don't sacrifice a personal interest for one who doesn't deserve it. Chances are this person won't even show gratitude.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
It's so unlike you to try to palm your responsibilities off onto someone else. Although this may be tempting, your conscience won't let you do it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
Before the day is over you'll realize what is important to you and what has true value, but earlier you may be sidetracked a bit by glitter.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Thoughtless persons can be found everywhere and one may cross your path today. Don't take anything to heart that this person says or does.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Concern that the truth might cause discomfort may tempt you to alter the facts of a story. Don't. Even little, white lies could get you in trouble.

If your birthday is Monday, May 9:
You may become involved in a rather unusual joint venture this coming year which caters to a unique public need. An ingenious associate will provide the concept.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Someone who has your best interests at heart is in a position to do more for you today than you can do for yourself. He's been lucky for you previously.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
You'll conduct yourself well today in the presence of others. Two persons you've recently met will seek a closer association.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Conditions are both unusual and favorable today where your work or career is concerned. Be ready to capitalize on new opportunities.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Try to get together socially today with one who shares a important mutual interest. His fresh ideas could inspire you to new heights.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
If a joint venture is moving in the right direction, subdue temptations to tamper with it today. You'll be luckier letting it run its course.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
"Warm" and "amiable" are the words which best describe you today. The impression you make on associates will be favorable and lasting.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Your possibilities for personal accumulation are very promising today. You may be able to add to your resources through indirect happenings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
You are capable of handling situations of considerable size and scope today. Don't fritter your time away on small ventures which count for little.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
You're likely to pursue a secret ambition today, and it's a pity others won't know what you're up to. Your methods for achieving your goals will be ingenious.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
Something about which you are hopeful is not an idle pipe dream.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Your luckiest areas today are those which relate to your career or finances.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
You may be in for some pleasant surprises today. Spur-of-the-moment developments could turn a dull day into a fun one.

Weekly support groups for battered women

Battered Women's Alternatives is now offering support groups for battered and formerly-battered women who live in Contra Costa County.

The groups are a safe place for women to explore their feelings about their relationships. The groups also provide the proper atmosphere for women to sort out their confusion over relationships that are sometimes bad and sometimes good.

The meetings are weekly and available on a drop-in basis. The county-wide locations are confidential, as is the information shared by participants.

Interested women should call the BWA phone line at 676-2848 for more information.

'Ben' needs foster home

Ben, a 17 year old Vietnamese boy, needs a foster home for a year.

Ben (not his real name) has a warm personality and is interested in learning more about American life and culture.

Currently he is in an ungraded class at about the ninth or tenth grade level and is also taking special instruction in English. Foster parents who are patient and sensitive to cultural differences could help Ben make a good transition to living in America, and develop the skills he will need to become self-supporting.

If you are interested in providing a home for Ben, call Alameda County Foster Home Licensing at 874-5527. The payment for board and care of teenages is $311 per month. Medical expenses are covered by Medi-Cal.
